"Sea Change"

The series Sea Change visualizes the inherent potential for metamorphosis. Below the surface, complexities are concealed and contradictions buried. Sea Change liberates these alternative realities through various forms of photo manipulation. Each transformation—a kind of shape shifting—is unique and unpredictable yet compelling and intriguing.

The idea of "sea change" has a rich history. The term was first used in Shakespeare's play The Tempest in 1610.

Bold colour is a recurring theme in my landscape photographs.

The purple and orange series highlight contrasts in the natural environment. The purple flowers represent opening while the orange sunsets represent the closing of the day. The flowers were photographed indoors and the sunsets outdoors.

CRONE TREE

I was feeling so old and dry that I went out at sunset, to sit on a stump across the lake from the silhouette of the old crone tree. She is but branches now, barren of leaf and fruit, upright yet angular, crooked fingers open to amber dusk.

Dark as her form and heavy too—
my mind still rooted in my past mistakes—
wincing at this foolish choice, that angry outburst, this holding on to that nasty thought, after all this time. Even June seven o'clock sun didn't warm me. Even the shimmer of golden sunglow on water didn't help. But beyond her matronly trunk-stance in the distance, three humped mounds of earth like the backs of pachyderms.

Some say elephants never forget yet don't hang onto wrongs; they hold past happiness like a fern rolled up into their curled trunks. They wave green memory flags over dried up lakes, recalling the reasons they drudge through dust as a pack. Stronger in herd, their rule.

This tree looks lonely, like me, far from any others.

I remember a book that said trees might seem lonely at sunset, but these barked crones keep their ancestors' stone hearts in the clasp of their roots.

I gaze upon the old crone tree as the sun slides into lake, reflected in a few gilt sparkles. I am not alone.

"People in Seven Times"

In these photographs I wanted to try to capture people as they are experiencing a moment in their lives, revealing some special aspect of their unique personalities, their particular life situations and the hint of future possibilities. People in Seven Times is multilayered; referring to the different chronological stages of these individuals; how they appear to be presenting themselves to others; and how I as a photographer perceive them to be.

Neema's Musician in the lingering garden

AFTER THE STORM

Green leaves of elephant-ear rhubarb, fanning like vegetable victrolas, open as if to listen, tuned in to the girl's singing—

Strings on her lute taut, a lotus lovely in her braided hair, strands pulled into coils allowing just one tendril to escape. Her next-to-ring finger pressed to the fret, is she the unwed sister?

Her pink tunic and practiced fingers show study and society. Are there expectations? Carved wood roof and rolled bamboo blinds to shade her lily skin make a music box boat for her, floating slow as melody over the muddy lake.

What is she singing? Has she just wept? Alone, she looks only at the lute, holding it close and careful as first love. These great green leaves are dry, the lake water still, her silent song caught through the aperture of one woman's lens, who sees and snaps this solitary scene. Is she lonely? The singer? The woman witness?

What is that tale of white lotus beauty from mud, clarity after crushing thunderclap, lessons after losing love?

Does the picture-taker capture this song to frame her own sadness or make celebration of solitude into a still image—will the photographer look upon it reflecting, as I do now that the storm is over?

For years I have been photographing in the winter where the world in transformed into a pristine flowing landscape. I have been fascinated by the sculpted formations created by wind and storms. This year I started to see the soft contours of female forms emerging in the snow—on hills, in snow banks, on the river sides. The images appeared to me cloaked in snow with the reflection of blue skies adding colour to the sculptures making them ever more pronounced.

I imagine that my eye would see a female form where others would see something else. Perhaps my wish for a more female consciousness in this world allows me to see these gorgeous formations.

Lockdown Emotions: Longing

The series Lockdown Emotions is based upon my own situation during the COVID-19 lockdown when interactions with family and friends were curtailed. My most profound reaction was a sense of grief over not being with my grandchildren, particularly my granddaughter Estelle (then 6-7 years old), with whom I had shared many wonderful experiences over the years. I was literally artistically paralyzed and did not undertake any creative activity. However, I spent many hours going through photographic files of images I had taken. After my first vaccination, with the coming of spring and the blooming of glorious flowers, I began to feel more positive and creative. I used some of my favorite photos of Estelle and flora as the basis of multimedia art pieces that expressed my emotions during the lockdown.

Mary's Lockdown Emotions: Expectation

While hiking some years ago, I came across a rusted and decomposing car deep in the woods. Although it was dismaying to see this thoughtlessly junked waste degrading the environment, at the same time there was something intriguing about the way it had started to become part of the landscape and be taken over by the forest growth. These mixed media pieces are an attempt to capture the joining together of the car and nature using photo transfers, collage, paint and drawing.

THE TANGLED FOREST

This summer, at my mother's back woods home, rain silvers the windows, blurs the trees.

To amuse her I invent new adventures for Mother's favourite witch: Baba Yaga. Her nickname too.

A farmer tethers his daughter to his shadow.

Baba Yaga appears. Her advice: Eat the rope!

The witch transforms a maiden's bucket into a sieve.

The girl returns to the well three times arrives home, bucket empty three times before she understands.

During lunch, Mother tells my husband, who isn't here:
"You are so funny!
Ta deh!" Really.
She speaks more Ukrainian now than she has in fifty years.
"Nosta-troshka-yeh!" Almost done!
She tells me as she shreds her crusts.

Then she lapses into sleep, head lolling on her bony rocker, mouth a dark, cob-webby chasm.

The seat is too low.

Mother can't get up.

Has lightning flashed
through the forest of her mind?
She smacks my hands away.

"Noooh! No! No!"
Squeezes her eyelids closed.

I reach into my sluggish heart for my most crimson kindness. "Momm, Mom, Mom," I urge, my words padding like rain through the snarled ganglia of her mind, its dying embers of Devil's Paintbrush, the lingering scent of Lemon Thyme from her overgrown garden.

Her moss-green eyes meet mine. I remind her to circle my waist. I plant my feet, grasp her arms above the elbows and lift her upright. Pause until she stops swaying like the maple with so many dead branches in the wind. I hold out her cane. Watch her teeter to her room for another nap.

She will not walk her lane, even between showers. Her memory the maiden's sieve, she's forgotten the way home from the neighbours' house.

Sometimes I feel trapped in the tangled forest of her brain. The Yellow birch rain-polished rose gold bark, broken in a storm. droops across her lane. I can't duck under its hanging, sodden crown. Its rough green cloths scour my face. At the crossroads, the fallen cherry tree. Boots caked with mud. my legs weigh too much. Lam too tired to climb over today.

While visiting Mahone Bay in Nova Scotia in the summer of 2019 (the last summer one could travel!), I woke up early one morning and went for a walk. It was dawn, and the sky over the sea was turning from blue to orange...coolness in the air, the water still as glass, all very quiet. A breath before the world awoke – a sense of anticipation and of hope.

In my artistic work I seek to express something that comes from that mysterious place beyond physical reality where everything that is true and really important in life lives. Moments are given to us when connections become clear – between ourselves and the world, ourselves and spirit.

"Our Garden Walls"

I have always been enchanted by the way in which humans everywhere turn the walls of their houses into gardens. Even in the most confined spaces, people encourage nature to flourish, using pots of all shapes and sizes in lieu of flower beds and orchards. The gardeners are absent in these photographs, but their personalities and enthusiasms can be read there. It is not a one-way street, where the plants are simply tamed in their pots, but a joyous collaboration between the gardeners and their flowers, ferns and shrubs; the plants make their own decisions about how they bring a conceptually wider space into the human brick and mortar habitats.

KAITLYN SEIBOLD is an emerging artist and dance educator who completed her MFA for Dance, Choreography & Collaboration at York University. She was awarded the Lipson Family Endowment Award for the most promising emerging choreographer. Taking part in an ongoing investigation with the moving body in the theatre and alternative performance spaces, Seibold aims to create conversational work while providing stimulating and healthy collaborative experiences. Her recent works address collaboration between movement and technology while concentrating on engagement within virtual performance platforms. These include: Birth of a B at the Citadel & Compagine and Meeting at R9 at Dance Ontario. Seibold is currently working with Frog in Hand based out of Toronto. www.kaitlynseibold.com.

JOANNE SHENFELD's work has appeared in juried shows at Gallery 1313, North Toronto Group of Artists, Tarragon Theatre, Toronto Public Library, Lift Ground Print Studio/Gallery and the Wychwood Barns Art Market. Most recently, one of her paintings was featured on the cover of the Life Section of the Toronto Star (https://tinyurl.com/evokelandscape), and on the cover of the poetry book To Measure the World by Karen Shenfeld (Ekstasis Editions, 2020).

JANA SKARECKY was born in the Czech Republic, and lives near Binbrook, Ontario. Besides being a photographer and painter, she is a composer whose works have been performed on four continents. She has written music for solo instruments, chamber groups, solo voice, choir, and orchestra. She has been chair of the Association of Canadian Women Composers, and is a member of the Visual Arts and Music sections of the Heliconian Club.

Jana finds working with music and art a stimulating combination, and often paints and composes on the same subject. Jana's art has been exhibited in Toronto, Mississauga, Kitchener-Waterloo, Stratford, New York, and Odense, Denmark. www.JanaSkarecky.com

PATRICIA STAMP has been taking photographs since she was eight, and exhibiting her work with Toronto arts organizations since 2009, after a career as an African Studies professor at York University in Toronto. The digital and film archive that forms the basis of her photo art includes images from five continents and many islands, across an array of subject matter. She has always been attracted to the margins of place, time and mind. She looks for the beauty and meaning to be found in the world's liminal places, at the interface of elements - water, sky, rock, plant, artefact... and in this case, an intimate interface between humans and nature.
